THERE was a little Freshman,
 And he tried a little bluff,
 And he wrote a little bluebook
 All full of clever stuff.
 But the cruel old professor
 Smiled with most malicious glee,
 As he marked the Freshie's bluebook
 With a tiny little D.

The Football Season

1905 By P. A. Richardson, Manager

AFTER reviewing the football season of 1905 carefully, Washington University was a success. By this we do not mean that the 1905 team of Washington University mean that the team ran up hundreds of points to their opponents' nothing, or that they did not lose a game nor have their goal line crossed; but that they never entered a game in which they did not play their best and never came out of a game without having acquitted themselves well. No game in which Washington University participated was marred by unsportsmanlike conduct on the part of any one of its men. The team went through the season hopelessly beaten, as far as weight was concerned, and probably owes its victories to the fact that it was made up of bona fide students, clean players, who played with sincere enthusiasm for the love of the game itself and for Washington University.

The team was badly beaten by Indiana University and Kansas University. Indiana had the best team that Washington met in 1905. It outweighed Washington thirty pounds to the man and the heavy mass plays of Indiana were too much for the light Washington team. Kansas University had a good team. They outweighed Washington twenty pounds to the man; and the game was played in mud and water during a heavy rain storm. The Washington players felt that on a dry field, they would have made a much better showing against Kansas. The defeat at the hands of Drury, six to five, was a surprise and a disappointment. Drury was counted as an easy game and was placed in between Kansas and Missouri, and although Washington had not entirely recovered from their hard trip and game at Kansas and were unfortunate in losing Captain Lehman early in the game, they were still good enough to win from Drury. Drury played hard, consistent football and deserved her victory. Rose Poly had an exceptionally strong team this year and gave Washington a good game 0-0. The victories over Westminster, Arkansas, Illinois College, Missouri School of Mines and Knox College were clean-cut and decisive. The victory over Missouri State University was earned after one of the most spectacular and brilliant football struggles seen on local gridirons in the past five years. It is unfortunate that darkness settled down over the field before the game was ended. However, inasmuch as Missouri failed to take advantage of the sudden darkness and lost the ball on her own forty-five yard line by three straight line bucks instead of using the fake buck and wide-end run employed by Washington so successfully a few moments later, remembering that Missouri scored one touchdown on a fumble, and that the first half and part of the second was played entirely in Missouri's territory, it can be safely said that the best team won and deserved their victory.

Too much cannot be said of the men on the team and their conscientious and honest effort to make the season a success, and of the gentlemanly and sportsmanlike manner in which they conducted themselves. C. Castlen, Jameson, Cornell and Stone, from the Medical Department, did good work. C. Castlen was nery and distinguished himself by his good tackling. Jameson was the hardest worker on the team and a brilliant player. Cornell had weight and used it well. Stone was "old reliable," and one of the most consistent players on the team. Hunt, Johnson and Martin came from the Dental Department. Hunt was a great help to a runner and carried the ball well; Johnson held down the trying position at center in a highly satisfactory manner. Martin was the most enthusiastic member of the squad and has many yards to his credit. The Undergraduate Department gave us Bock, Jacobs, H. Castlen, Johnston, Thomas, Heimbuecher and Stevens. Bock who was a hard plodding player, Stevens who always did his best, and that best was good, and Jacobs, who was generally the last one up from every pile, did telling work. Heimbuecher who made good at guard, H. Castlen who ran the team in a heady manner, Johnston, another enthusiastic member and excellent player, and Thomas, one of the most consistent players on the team and a good man, proved themselves valuable additions to the team.

From the Law School, we had Dan Dillon Jr., W. Schaumberg and Fritz Lehman. Dillon's work at quarter and later at half was good. He knew the fine points of football and used his knowledge. The work of Schaumberg is above reproach. Playing against men who outweighed him, anywhere from ten to thirty pounds, he not only held his own but usually opened up that proverbial hole through which "a wagon can go" with ease. Lehman as Captain was a real Captain. He worked hard himself and used his head all the time. He probably gained more ground than any other man on the team, due to his own ability as a football player and to the excellent support given him by the team. His punting, and brilliant execution of trick plays were without doubt the features of the season.

It is hoped that with the good showing that the 1905 Team made, football will continue to improve at Washington and that the 1906 season will end with even greater satisfaction to every one concerned than was felt at the close of the 1905 season.

A Baseball Retrospect for 1905

By Arno D. Krauss, Manager

THE Spring of 1905 marked the beginning of a new era in Athletics at Washington; for it was then that the athletic teams first trained in their splendidly equipped gymnasium and athletic field. Inspired by this fact the candidates for the team worked faithfully, and though the record made was not exceptionally brilliant, it must be remembered that the 'Varsity was called upon to meet some of the strongest colleges in the Middle West and that several games with the smaller colleges were prevented, by unforeseen circumstances, from taking place.

The season opened on Saturday, April 8, with the St. Louis Country Club game which Washington won by the score of 10-4. The following Thursday saw the 'Varsity lined up against the strong nine of Concordia Seminary, and with five 'Varsity players out of the game on account of examinations, the resulting victory for our opponents (11—3) was not wholly unexpected. On April 15, a series of games with preparatory schools was begun, and Smith Academy lost to Washington 17—3. Manual Training School was next brought into camp to the tune of 11—1. On April 21, High School brought our winning streak to an end by defeating the Varsity in a close game, 10—8. The next two games scheduled were those with Shurtleff College, April 26, and Illinois College, April 29, respectively; but on account of rain and wet grounds both dates were cancelled.

On May 5th, the Varsity scored a well-deserved triumph when it defeated the team of Nebraska in a faultless game of 1—0. In this game both the pitching of Title and the support of the players were all that could be asked. On the following day our opponents reversed the results and after being held down for six innings, suddenly took a winning streak and batted out a victory 16—0.

The game with Westminster College which was scheduled for May 10, was cancelled by the disbanding of the latter's team.

After a two weeks' trip through the Southwest, our old rival Missouri met us on the morning of the 12th of May, and when the smoke of battle cleared away, victory was ours 13—4. The second game, scheduled for the following afternoon, was prevented by rain. On May 19th, Washington met Rose Polytechnic, and in a ten-inning, hard-fought game was defeated. The game was largely a pitcher's battle between Captain Daly of the Rose Polytechnic team and Title of Washington.

The following week the Varsity met Missouri at Columbia and was beaten twice 4—1 and 13—0. The week's trip South was broken up, much to the regret of the men on the team, by the unavoidable cancellation of dates with Arkansas—May 30 and 31, and with Drury College—June 1. On the 2nd and 3rd of June, the schedule was completed by two games with the Missouri School of Mines at Rolla. Washington lost both of these games, the first by the score of 9—6 and the second 1—0. The latter game was considered the best baseball game ever played at Rolla, and despite the unfavorable result, was the occasion for some very creditable work on the part of Washington.

The School for Scandal

On the evening of March 16, 1906, at the Odeon, the Washington University Dramatic Club gave its second annual play, Sheridan's "The School for Scandal." This performance was the second one, since the organization of the Club a year and a half ago, in one of the large theatres of St. Louis. The Odeon was filled with a large and responsive audience whose enthusiasm was, however, due not only to the personal interest taken in the actors, but also to the excellence of their work. To the able direction of Miss Mildred Hoyle, the coach, a large measure of the success of the undertaking must be attributed. By her energetic work in coaching she made it possible for the whole play, from the rising of the curtain on the charming Prologue, to its dropping after the Epilogue, to run off almost without a hitch and entirely without the aid of a prompter.

The press was very favorable in its comments, paying the club quite a compliment in placing its criticism of the performers on almost a professional basis. The work of Miss Grace as "Lady Teazle" and that of Mr Allen as "Sir Peter" were especially commended. The interpretation of each of these roles showed close study and sympathy with the characters in question. The rest of the characters were also very creditably done, especially in view of the fact that many of the members of the cast had never seen "The School for Scandal" presented by professionals.

The song, "Let the Toast Pass," sung in the third act by Mr. Paddock with the music used in the original production at Drury Lane Theatre, added greatly to the eighteenth-century color of the play. The presence of the Mandolin Club and of the Senior ushers in caps and gowns alone recalled one to the present by lending to the whole, a distinctive twentieth-century college air.

Dr. Paul Y. Tupper.
Dr. H. S. Crossen.

The present year, the third year of the existence of the Christian Association in Washington, finds the Association more strongly intrenched in the favor of the student body and a more potent spiritual and social influence than ever before. No student body in the Middle West whether in church or state school can boast of a stronger organization.

More enthusiasm has been shown in the Bible Study Department than in any other activity of the organization. The Bible Study Classes have enrolled a large number of men and have enlisted an increasing interest on the part of the men enrolled.

The Association is planning to supply a much-needed feature of the school by opening a gymnasium.

We of the Medical Department take this opportunity to recommend to the whole of this great University the Y. M. C. A. It is the greatest student brotherhood in the world.

To a Cap and Gown

Let milliners tell of the wondrous confections
 Designed to your taste or all ready for wear;
 The plumes and the bows that adorn their selections
 Are nothing to me—for not one do I care.
 For lovelier far than the costliest bonnet
 Intended for shopping, reception or show,
 Is a mortarboard cap with a tassel upon it,
 On the head of a certain sweet Senior I know.

Let dressmakers prate of the costumes they fashion,
 Of heavy brocade or of shimmering silk,
 Of ribbons and laces that people spend cash on;
 I give not a fig for all clothes of that ilk,
 Their robes may be stylish and greatly commended,
 The suits that they cut be the talk of the town;
 But prettier far, be they ever so splendid
 Is a Senior I know in her long, flowing gown.

The Knight of the Daisy Chain

STEADMAN swung himself down to the station platform and looked around. This was undoubtedly Hillside; the little rustic building bore the sign conspicuously in ornamental letters. But if it had not been for that, Steadman told himself as he walked up the main street, he would hardly have known the town. Such an air of thrift and prosperity! Such noise, even though it was Sunday, the day of all others that had been quiet in the Hillside of former years!

All the old landmarks seemed to have disappeared. A substantial brick building stood on the side of the old "Grocery and Meat Market," and in place of the "corner house" that had marked the extreme limit of his childhood world, was a set of modern flats. But as he turned the corner and walked up the narrow street, he realized that one part of the town, at least, was substantially unchanged. Here were the same drooping maples, the same broad lawns, and there, just beyond, the house in which he had spent more of his waking hours than in his own home. Coming down the walk were two figures in dainty summer gowns. After one glance at them, Steadman hurried forward with a boyish laugh and outstretched hands.

"Mrs. Atwood! Jean! You surely haven't forgotten me." Jean gave a little start and flushed a warm, rosy red; then she put out both hands, prayer-book and all. Mrs. Atwood greeted him less impulsively, but with no less evident pleasure.

"Well, Bob!" she said. "Who would ever have dreamed that you would come back, after all this time? We have often wondered how you were getting along, for we have heard nothing from your father since you first went away. How is he, Bob?"

"Fine! He says he is good for fifty years more. He's at the head of the business now, and we are opening up a new branch office near here. That is how I happen to be here—at least, that is part of the reason."

"Well?" Jean looked up at him with arched brows and laughing eyes.

"Oh! You want to know the rest? You never were satisfied with half of anything, Jean. I was looking through some old papers of Father's last week, and I found—this."

"This" was a kodak picture of a boy and a girl standing together in the middle of a sunny field. He wore a paper helmet and a great wooden shield, both garlanded with daisies, and the little girl, who surveyed him with evident admiration, clasped a bunch of the blossoms in her arms

"Question," he said, "find the hero."

"You were a knight," she said slowly, "and you were riding to the lists."

"With your favor on my shield," he added.

"And you unhorsed—how many did you vanquish that time? But Mr. Steadman, whether you realize it or not, this town is progressing. We no longer stand on the street-corner and gossip as we used to do. Besides, we shall be late to church."

It is to be feared that Steadman did not derive much spiritual benefit from the morning prayer and sermon that Sabbath day. He rose and knelt with the congregation; he joined mechanically in the responses and hymns; but he was conscious all the time of Jean—Jean, as she sang the chants in her sweet, clear voice, as she knelt, with her head reverently bowed, as she sat beside him, her eyes fixed on the rector's face. The sweet, warm June air came in through the open window and stirred the ruffles on her dress and the little curls at her neck. Steadman wondered if she remembered the day that he had pulled her curls until she cried.

Dinner at the Atwood's consisted largely of reminiscences—how they had gone coasting on his bobsled, and how, one time when the snow was particularly deep, he had tipped her over head foremost into a drift—how they had made themselves sick on "Uncle Billy's" cherries—how they had hunted violets and gathered blackberries—and how Steadman had once killed a snake in Larkin's pasture.

"But I wasn't afraid," said Jean. "I defy you to say that I ran, or even screamed."

"You were plucky, all right," said Bob. "If you hadn't been I shouldn't have taken you along; that's certain." And Jean raised her eyebrows and surveyed the center-piece with a quizzical smile.

"Don't you want to go out and take a walk?" asked Mrs. Atwood, after dinner was over. "You will probably find a good many interesting things. Just think what stories you can tell your father of the growth of the city—for we are a city now—and the advance in real estate, and the elaborate system of public works that we have."

"Yes indeed, I should like it, if you and Jean are willing."

"I? Oh, Jeanie can go. We old people like to stay at home and rest in the afternoons. Yes, Bob, I think that is one of the first signs of advancing age. I have developed the habit, lately, of growing unbearably sleepy after lunch, and the only thing that does me any good is a half hour's nap. But, you two may go—only don't stay out too late, children."

There was much to see, though few of the old scenes remained. There was a row of neat frame cottages in the old walnut grove, and a model dairy where the best persimmons had grown. Old houses had disappeared, and new ones had taken their places. But every sight, even those that were most changed, awakened memories. Indeed, there were so many places to visit, and so much to talk about, that before they realized it, the afternoon was almost gone.

"Let me see," said Steadman, stopping at a corner. "Do we have to go clear around? Don't I remember a short cut home?"

"We might go down the lane and through the field. That will save about a block."

"The same old field? And bars, upon my word, just as though you didn't live in a progressive town! Jean, you and your mother and your place are the most satisfactory things that I have seen."

"Thank you," she curtsied. "Mother and I, I suppose, were born thus, and as for the field, the land is quite worthless, you know."

"Except to grow daisies on," said Steadman.

"Ah yes! The daisies!" she said, with the laughter all gone from her face, and a sudden wistfulness there instead.

The daisies bloomed in scattered clusters near the fence, and in great patches of white and gold further on. The stalks bent aside to let them pass, but even then a few blossoms reached up from the ground, to touch Jean's dress as she moved along.

"Do you remember," he asked, "how I used to bring 'King Arthur' down here and read you stories while you made daisy-chains? That was the gallant knight for you, taking his ease while the fair maiden worked her fingers to the bone."

"The fair maiden didn't mind," she said. "And you usually helped gather the flowers at least."

"By the same token, you ought to be willing to make a chain for me now, if I pick all the flowers." He laid a bunch of the blossoms in her lap. "But wasn't 'King Arthur' great?" he went on, as she twined the stems together. "And Launcelot! Do you remember the time that I went to Camelot in disguise?"

"And shut me up in the barn loft, and wouldn't even let me peep out, because you said I was guarding your shield? Yes, I remember. Oh, don't look so remorseful. You did release me after a while, and you didn't make me die every time that you fought—which was fortunate, for lying on a barge was far from pleasant."

"There was another time when I used to lock you up, wasn't there? What was your name then? Oh yes! You were Dame Lyonesse and I was Beauvais, and I slew about a dozen knights to set you free."

"And the tournaments! And the days that we rode a-maying. Doesn't it all seem like ages ago? And here I am, making daisy-chains, just the same as ever. There, it is all done now." She shook off the loose leaves and held up the wreath.

But her eyes were caught and held by his, as he bent toward her, the memory of that old time still strong in his face, but mingled with it a new, eager tenderness.

"Is it all over, Jeanie? Won't you let me be your knight always—now and forever?"

With a little laugh that ended in something suspiciously like a sob, she rose and slipped the daisy-chain over his head.

"In the name of God, St. George and St. Michael," she whispered, "I dub thee knight. Be brave, bold and loyal."

When I leave her in 'o7

And with sorrow from her part,

She shall still remain my idol,

Have her shrine within my heart.

In these years I've learned to love her;

Never shall that love grow cold;

Gladly will I sing her praises

Till my voice is weak and old.

Oh! Immortal be her name!

Never perish her fair fame!

Chronicle of Events

1905

- September 28 — Annual reception of Freshmen. Nothing doing.
- October 5 — Debating Club meets. Two members present. Adjourned sine die.
- October 7 — Rose Polytechnic football game, o—o.
- October 12 — Owing to delay caused by addition of silk ribbons, new management fails to get out October number of "Student Life."
- October 20 — Football team leaves for Bloomington, Indiana. Are side-tracked at Yockey (one lumber pile and one saloon). Stone much impressed by the name—and the saloon.
- October 21 — Beaten by Indiana, 39—0; but the field was muddy. "Glimm" Schaumberg tells the referee he ought to fall in—?
- October 22 — The return trip. We hear nothing but Yockey from Stone, and Murphy (Miss Murphy) from Johnston.
- October 31 — Sigma Alpha Epsilon entertain at their rooms.
- November 1 — Dramatic Club presents "Mrs. Gadabout's Busy Day." Miss Dickinson appears in some sensational eating stunts.
- November 3 — Football team leaves for Kansas. Hits a load of dynamite and kills a mule, but nothing happens. And it was Friday too. We feel we can lick Kansas.
- November 4 — 3:00 A. M. Jameson snores—Ye Gods! how he snores.
- November 4 — At Lawrence. Mud three inches deep, water three feet. More coming down, but we play just the same. After first down, Castlen has to be dug out.
- November 6 — "Student Life" comes out in silk ribbons. Great rush for copies.
- November 11 — Drury beats us, 6—5. Fritz makes a bum kick; and Schaumberg makes a touchdown without knowing it.

November 18 — Tiger's tail is twisted for third time in as many years.

November 22 — Gamble and Heimbuecher make their maiden appearance in Cupples' Theater in white ducks. ("Weren't they sweet," Co-Ed?)

November 30 — We knock Knox. 16—5.

December 6 — Football, M. E. E. E. vs. Civils. Four downs. Game called for charitable reasons.

December 14 — Freshmen dance. Sophs kidnap Freshmen President. Campus under martial law.

December 15 — '08 on mast at life-saving pond. Fierce scrimmage, but they're still there at noon. Plenty of fighting and coeds, and agreeable scarcity of faculty members.

December 16 — Quiet once more on campus. Black eyes, etc. Much debate as to who won. Chessin informs classes that they "shall work twinty-seven hours ivery day for dis."

December 20 — "High Life Below Stairs" given by Dramatic Club.

December 21 — Annual election of Athletic Association Officers. Usual fireworks. Much heat generated, but very little light. Beta Theta Pi dance.

1906

January 4 — Stork visits the dormitory—perfectly proper; he called on the chef.

January 5 — Big feed at Commons Hall in honor of Chef No. 2. Sigma Chi dance.

January 11 — Freshman—Sophomore snowball fight.

January 17 — Glee Club comes to life. Their first engagement is to sing in Grand Opera.

January 26 — Kakodyl Club gives banquet in Busch Hall. Red "lemonade" very popular.

February 5 — Seniors appear in cap and gown. Burn up World's Fair rubbish in annual bonfire and then treat Clayton to a serenade.

February 6 — Winterman gets a bill for fifty dollars for aforesaid rubbish.

- February 7 — Whitmire stays up all night to see the eclipse of the moon.
- February 8 — The eclipse takes place.
- February 9 — Sigma Alpha Epsilon dance at Odeon.
- February 12 — Basketball team journeys to Alton and defeats Shurtleff, 27—22.
- February 16 — Seniors again appear in cap and gown.
- February 21 — Junior promenade at the gym. Not enough light and too many stags, but otherwise a great success.
- February 22 — Eta Epsilon Tau reception.
- February 26 — Coeds snowbound. Section B. makes merry. Freshmen dive in snow (by request) for amusement of on-looking damsels and upper classmen.
- February 27 — Snow fort built south of library and valiant leaders have hand-to-hand combat in the terrific snow battle. (Post Dispatch says so.)
- March 9 — Lock and Chain dance.
- March 16 — Dramatic Club gives annual play, "A School for Scandal," at Odeon. Mandolin Club furnishes music and Senior girls act as ushers—stampede to get seats.
- March 17 — Theta Sigma reception.
- April 11 — Mass meeting to discuss honor system. Motion made to tie a cord on the third finger of the left hand of each student about to enter an examination, double knots to be used for Freshmen.
- April 12 — Debating Club gives Mock Trial in Chemistry Building.
- April 16 — Freshmen girls appear in pigtails, despite Senior ruling. Sophomore misses interfere in behalf of Seniors, but meet with strong resistance from the ladies with the pigtails, who use windows and finger-nails as a means of escape.
- April 18 — Senior girls give Seniors a feed in the British Pavilion. Gilbert leads by a sandwich, Tuholsky a close second with a macaroon.

- April 19 — Burnett cut stereotomy and Trelease didn't.
- April 20 — Kappa Sigma dance.
- April 25 — Monthly performance of Dramatic Club, "Quarantined Rivals." Miss Knoll is presented with a violet by her enthusiastic admirers.
- April 28 — Theta Xi banquet.
- April 30 — Annual Hatchet joke appears in April "Student Life."
- May 2 — Dormitories entertain. Sophomore—Freshmen track meet, won by Freshmen.
- May 11 — Varsity Track Meet. Debating team has close debate at Cincinnati.

The Co-Ed's Lament

(Caused by the Course in Pedagogy 4)

To think I've struggled all these years
On Learning's rugged way,
To find that it's a grand mistake
And really doesn't pay!

For Mr. Guyau's little book,
Which surely must be right,
Says men don't care for learned girls
Or women that are bright.

He asks what Edwin ever came To Angelina's feet
Because she knew her German nouns
And French verbs, all complete.

'Tis not a wise philosopher
Or scientist man seeks;
The things he wants are laughing eyes
And dimpled, rosy cheeks.

So I will have to change my life
And mend my ways, 'tis clear,
Like Wolsey, bid a long farewell
To all my greatness here.

I'll cultivate a charming smile,
Massage my face at night,
Put belladonna in my eyes
To make them sparkle bright;

And so, perhaps, with care I may
Escape the spinster's fate;
My only solace is to hope
It is not yet too late.,

The Sophomore Eve

ONCE upon a time, long ago, there was a very nicely proper little Eve who lived in a great big Eden called a University. And there were many, many trees in this Eden; and the fruit of them all was knowledge. And there were many gardeners who tended and pruned and trimmed the trees and plucked their fruits. And every gardener waited in his turn to catch the nicely proper little Eve and hold her nose and ram the fruit of his own particular tree of knowledge down her throat, until at length she became very fat and very wise. And people called her Sophomore.

Then came the Serpent into the garden. He looked at the sleek and sophomore Eve and a wicked plan came into his base heart and he said to her, "What dost thou in this garden?"

"Oh," answered the maiden between gulps, "I eat of the trees of knowledge and grow wise."

"And art thou happy?" asked the wily tempter.

"Truly, I know not, for I have not time to think."

"And dost thou eat of all the fruits of the garden?"

"All," answered the wise one, "excepting that of the small tree in the middle of the Eden. The fruit it bears is unwholesome, they have told me, and therefore no gardener tends it."

The serpent opened his eyes very wide. "On that tree," he said, "grows a fruit worth more than all the rest to thee and it is very sweet."

"They have not told me so," murmured the Eve watching the tree from the corners of her eyes.

"Try it," said the tempter, "the fruit hangs so low that it needs no gardener. Try it. Just one nibble."

So the maiden took one nibble and then another and she opened her eyes very wide and looked about her, and behold! the world was changed. For the gardeners were naught but stupid old men and the trees but ugly old trunks whose fruits were bitter. Then she ate again of the fruit which grew on the small tree in the center of the garden and she laughed and chattered as she ate. And the gardeners came and found her there and would have drawn her away; but she laughed and chattered and would not come; and she was very happy. And they bore her to the gates of Eden and cast her out. But as she heard the great doors clank behind her, she looked and saw that many trees like unto that in the center of the garden shaded the roadway in which she stood. And she laughed and chattered and was very glad, for she was no longer wise.

A Sophomore's Dream

(After a night at the frat)

LAST night I dreamed of a land so fair,
Where the rivers were Budweiser beer,
Where fountains of rickys shot up in the air;
And everything else was queer.

Wide brooks of gin fizzes on every hand,
Great lakes of cold Rhine wine.
And pumps spouting cocktails to beat the band,
For the thirsty ones standing in line.

Creme de menthe swamps of beautiful green,
With islands of fine cracked ice.
Such a sight I had never seen;
Oh, but that dream was nice.

Mint juleps in puddles filled the streets,
The gutters flowed over with booze,
Where tired Juniors soaked their feet,
And enjoyed a heavenly snooze.

Champagne burst from the fire plugs
In bubbly streams with a hiss;
And the "White Wings" drank it from deep stone jars,
Oh! such a dream of bliss.

High-balls galore rolled about on the ground,
And were chased by a thirsty crowd;
While paralyzed grafters hanging round
In tipsy glee shouted aloud.

Oh! this bibulous dream was a happy one,
The result of a night at the frat.
For the wet things flowed in a beautiful stream,
And they carried me home on a slat.

A toast to the Medics of 1907

All the courses on the slate,
All degrees that lie in wait,
All success for each classmate;
These we drink to 1908.

Naughty! Naughty!

The notice read: "The Dramatic Club dues are payable at once to Mr. Allen." Below was written: "Give the Devil his Dues."

Dr. Petzman (to patient presenting a swollen foot): "It is my opinion you are suffering with an idiopathic erysipilas."

Patient: "Ery—h—l; young man, a bee stung me."

All the world's a stage and all the numerous doctors merely ushers
—both ways.

Stranger (timidly): "I understand that this is Clayton. Where is the license office, young man?"

Murray (with a been-there-myself look): "What you want is 'Couples Two.' Just west of the quadrangle."

A Romance in Germany

A neat bacillus with rounded ends,
Was seen by means of a powerful lens,
Moving with undulatory grace
Through a fashionable lymphatic space;
His graceful appearance would take with some
As he picked his teeth with a flagellum,
Though he flirted in a way to shock us
With every common gonococcus.

His mind was filled, one might say wholly,
With thoughts of sweet Amoeba Coli,
Her mobile form, was his conjecture,
Languished within the sigmoid flexure.
So hurrying through an abscess rancid
To an artery of rapid transit,
He took, in a depot of congestion,
A blood disk bound for the large intestine.

And then he thought of the bliss in store,
Of Amoeba and a baby spore,
And how they'd dwell in a sacculi neat
In a calm and scybalous retreat;
But just as he reached Amoeba's door
He heard a protoplasmic roar,
And there, repulsive in his might,
Was a hungry, savage phagocyte.

His mouth was large and his words profane,
So our hero drew his good ptomaine.
"Swish! Snap!" went a pseudopodic jaw
And "Gulp!" went a phagocytic maw,
While his mistress saw a vacancy
Where her loved bacillus used to be;
Then Amoeba, with a doleful shiver,
Went far away to the doleful liver.

Lindsay Knows

There's a member of the Freshmen class
Who can always tell your woes;
From the making of a hay-press,
To the latest style in hose.
From the California redwood
To the shrub that common grows,
"There ain't no use in talkin', Lindsay knows."

When it comes to "argufying,"
He is there without a doubt;
Whether it's the Panama canal
Or Dr. Pippin's gout,
The making of a rubber ring,
Or why still water flows,
"There ain't no use in talkin', Lindsay knows."

A normal day's lab. work by the class of 1909.
(From a sketch by the Hatchet War Correspondent on the firing line.)

“By their Words ye shall know them”

Prof. Mann—“Unfortunate.”

Mr. Starbird—“Now-er-at the University of Chicago.”

Mr. Vose—“In other words.”

Prof. Van Ornum—“In point of fact.”

Prof. Woodward—“ I want you should know this.”

Mr. McGoodwin—“Rotten.”

Prof. Langsdorf—“The reason for that is this.”

Mr. Spiering—“Happy.”

Chancellor Chaplin—“Y-e'-e''-e'''-e''''-e'-s.”

Dr. Reif—“It is just that not.”

Mr. Leavitt—“Now when I was at the lead works.”

Dr. Chessin—“Vipe it oudt.”

Prof. Shipley—“Where did you get that?”

Prof. Holmes Smith—“Whilst.”

Prof. Douay—“Abovall.”

Dr. Keiser—“That's very nice.”

Dr. James—“Ar-r-rational function.”

Mr. Ewington—“That may be so.”

Mr. Pyle—“Did you ever notice?”

Prof. Snow—“Now the cause and effect—”

Prof. Winston—“To get back to the point.”

(With apologies to Browning.)

Oh, the little more, and how much it is!
Oh, the little less, and what worlds away!
How an "A" can quicken content to bliss,
Or a "D" disturb the blood's best play;
And exams be a proof of this.

THE SLOGAN OF THE CAMERON — "CHARACTER: THE GRANDEST THING"

CAMERON PUMPS

The most durable, effective, reliable and economical in cost of maintenance of any pump on the market.

Nearly 50 years actual satisfactory service.

More than 60,000 in use the world over.

Sectional view of Regular Pattern

¶ All Cameron Pumps are compact and strongly built with few working parts and no outside valve gear or moving parts.

EXPLANATION.

A is the steam cylinder; C, the piston; L, the steam chest; F, the chest plunger, the right-hand end of which is shown in section; G, the slide valve; H, a lever, by means of which the steam-chest plunger F may be reversed by hand when expedient; II are reversing valves; KK are the reversing valve chamber bonnets, and EE are exhaust ports leading from the ends of the steam-chest direct to the main exhaust and closed by the reversing valves II.

Note the very simple inside valve gear in the Steam End, free from delicate parts and absolutely reliable.

The superiority of the Cameron water valve chest is its accessibility. By simply removing one bonnet or cover, the whole interior, with every valve, is plainly visible; not a speck of anything that may have lodged there can escape detection. The shelves or decks are bored out tapering and the brass seats forced in. Each stem holds two valves with their springs, one above the other, so that by simply unscrewing one plug and pulling up the stem, both are released.

Our catalogue "H A" is an attractive book, interesting and helpful, containing full descriptions with illustrations of other patterns and will be sent to any who will mention this book when writing.

WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY

DENTAL DEPARTMENT

MISSOURI DENTAL COLLEGE

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI

THE FORTY-FIRST ANNUAL SESSION

Will begin on Tuesday, October 2, 1906, and continue thirty-two weeks, exclusive of holidays. This department is located on the corner of 27th and Locust Streets. The building is the most commodious, best lighted and best ventilated west of the Mississippi. It is furnished newly throughout, and the facilities for teaching dentistry are unsurpassed.

The advantages offered by a large University, like Washington University, should appeal to those intending to enter the profession of dentistry. The time is approaching when dental instruction will be confined to the great Universities of the country.

While the student body of the Dental Department of Washington University is not so large as some other schools, yet, the results accomplished are more satisfactory. It is a known fact that while the Dental Department of Washington University has graduated fewer students, in comparison to the time it has been teaching, yet, for the number of its graduates, it has turned out more teachers of dentistry than any other school in the United States.

Anyone desiring to take up the study of dentistry would do well to investigate this department thoroughly before deciding to go elsewhere.

For annual announcement, and other information regarding school,

DR. J. H. KENNERLY, Dean,

IMPERIAL COLUMBIA DENTAL CHAIRS

are the finest dental chairs ever produced. The lifting mechanism is similar to that used on Favorite Columbia Chairs, which is admittedly the finest lifting mechanism for dental chairs ever devised. When the back and headrest have been adjusted for a patient, they retain their proper relations to the patient, however the chair back may be raised or lowered. This is a new feature of great value and convenience and permits easy and simple manipulation of the chair in case of need. The upholstered back is in two parts and forms, when opened, a handsome and convenient child's chair. For beauty of design, excellence of construction and smoothness of action, this chair is unequalled.
